

In all there are six canonically required areas of study for those who aspire to ordination as priests:

- ❖ The Holy Scriptures
- ❖ Christian Theology
- ❖ History of the Church
- ❖ Worship
- ❖ Ethics/Moral Theology
- ❖ The Practice of Ministry

The presumption is that at the end of the course of study, individuals will sit for the Church's General Ordination Examination (GOE) as administered by The Episcopal Church. The schema below outlines the general load requirements that an individual will undertake in working through the appropriate course of study in the Steven School for Ministry (SSFM).

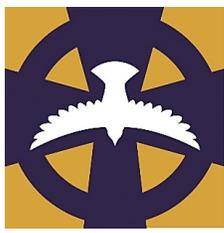

The load is distributed so that if a student elects to take a "full load" (2 courses per term), he or she would be able to complete the entire course of study in four calendar years. Of course, as each student moves through the ordination process as outlined by their respective diocesan authorities (Bishop, Commission on Ministry, Board of Examining Chaplains), the individual may need to lighten the load, take a leave of absence from active study, or respond to other circumstances that may not be of a canonical nature. In such cases, it is understood that the time needed to complete the course of study may be lengthen. The suggestion has been made that a maximum of six years be imposed for completion under normal circumstances. Exception would be at the discretion of the ecclesiastical authorities involved.

The current plan is to maintain formation cohorts that are identified at the beginning of every year. Once ascribed to a cohort, the individual will remain identified with the cohort until the completion of the course of study. If an individual's course of study is extended and no members of the cohort remain, that student may opt to join an existing cohort until the completion of their studies.
